

Making an Appeal

Community Treatment Order

What is a Community Treatment Order?

A Community Treatment Order (CTO), is also known as Supervised Community Treatment (SCT). You are on a CTO because your responsible clinician thinks that you are well enough to leave hospital but is concerned you may not continue with your treatment or may need to be admitted to hospital again at short notice for more treatment.

After six months a CTO can be renewed for six more months and then for periods of twelve months, if your responsible clinician and an approved mental health practitioner agree that it needs to continue.

While on a CTO you are asked to keep to certain arrangements for your treatment or to other arrangements to help you live safely in the community and stay well. These are called 'conditions'.

Making an Appeal

If you do not want to stay on a CTO, you can ask some independent people to consider if it should stay in place. This is called an appeal.

You can appeal to two different groups of independent people:

- the Tribunal; and
- the Mental Health Act Managers

You can choose to appeal to both groups or to just one of them.

The Mental Health Act Managers

You can ask the Mental Health Act (MHA) Managers to review your CTO at least once within each period of six or twelve months. A hearing with them should take place within four weeks.

In addition, the MHA Managers will automatically review your CTO (even if you do not ask them to) if your responsible clinician:

- extends your CTO; or
- bars a request from your nearest relative for your CTO to be ended.

You will meet with three MHA Managers. They are independent people who do not work for the hospital.

One of the MHA Managers will chair the hearing and introduce themselves to you shortly before it starts.

You can ask for an independent advocate to help you at the hearing.

The hearing will take place in a meeting room in a hospital or community team base.

You and your advocate can attend. If you have chosen a legal representative for a tribunal (see below), they can also attend. You can bring a relative or friend with you. Your responsible clinician and care co-ordinator/social worker will also attend.

Before the hearing starts, the MHA Managers will read reports from your responsible clinician and care co-ordinator/social worker. During the hearing the MHA Managers will ask them questions about the reports. You and your advocate/legal representative can also ask questions. You can speak to the MHA Managers alone at the end of the hearing if you would like to.

The MHA Managers will then decide if you meet the criteria for a CTO. If they decide that you do not, they will discharge you from it. The Chair will tell you and your advocate/legal representative what they have decided.

If you would like a MHA Managers' hearing, tell your care co-ordinator/social worker, advocate or legal representative or contact the hospital Mental Health Act Administrator.

The Tribunal

You can apply for a tribunal once within each period of six or twelve months. The tribunal then normally takes place within about six weeks.

There may also be occasions when the law requires a tribunal to be set up for you (even if you have not asked for one) in order to ensure that your rights are being protected.

The tribunal is a group of three independent people who do not work for the hospital. They are:

- a judge (who chairs the tribunal);
- a doctor; and
- another person.

You can ask for a legal representative to help you at the tribunal. You will not have to pay. You can choose from the list of legal representatives in this booklet. If you do not choose one, the tribunal may do so for you.

The tribunal doctor will not normally meet you before the tribunal, unless you tell your legal representative that you would like to see them.

The tribunal will take place in a meeting room in a hospital or community team base. Your legal representative will attend. You are encouraged to attend as well but do not have to. You can bring a relative or friend with you. Your responsible clinician and care co-ordinator/social worker (or colleague representing them) will also attend.

Before the tribunal starts, its members will read reports from your responsible clinician and care co-ordinator/social worker. During the tribunal they will ask questions about the reports. Your legal representative can also ask questions.

The tribunal will then decide if you meet the criteria for a CTO. If it decides that you do not, it will discharge you from it. The tribunal Chair will tell you and your legal representative what they have decided.

If you would like a tribunal, tell your care co-ordinator/social worker, legal representative or advocate or contact the hospital Mental Health Act Administrator.

Advocates

Please tell your care co-ordinator/social worker or hospital Mental Health Act Administrator if you would like to speak to an independent advocate.

You can also contact the Advocacy Service yourself:

- Gloucestershire - POhWER 0300 003 1162
- Herefordshire – Onside on 01905 27525

Legal Representatives

The legal representatives on this list specialise in the Mental Health Act and are able to represent clients at tribunals free of charge. The list shows legal representatives in surrounding areas. Other legal representatives may also be available and can be found at:

www.lawsociety.org.uk/support-services/accreditation/mental-health/
(and click on 'List of members').

The hospital Mental Health Act Administrator is happy to contact the legal representative you choose.
