

Oliver McGowan Mandatory Training in Learning Disability and Autism Trial

This training is named after Oliver McGowan, whose tragic death in 2016 highlighted the need for health and social care staff to have better training in learning disabilities and autism.

It is part of a national commitment to develop a standardised training package, and we are one of four national partners appointed to co-design and co-deliver the training for groups of health and social care staff as part of the national trial.

Tier 1 entails two hours of online activity including viewing an information film and attending a 30-minute live webinar. It is relevant to all staff working in any sector who may occasionally interact with autistic people or people with a learning disability, but who do not have responsibility for providing direct care or making decisions about care or support.

Tier 2 is a live hybrid event for which you can book a physical or online place. It is co-delivered by an Expert by Experience, a family carer and a professional person working within a learning disability service.

This whole-day event is relevant to health and social care staff and others with responsibility for providing care and support for autistic people or people with a learning disability, but who would seek support from others for complex management or complex decision making.
